ALBANY, March 21, 1869 We have had the longest session in the Assembly to-day of any this winter. The House remained in session from eleven o'clock A. M. until half-past six P. M., quarceling over the constitutionality of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors. About five P. M., and after the bers had worn the original subject threadbare, Mr-Tracy offered a substitute providing that the question of an amendment to the constitution on the liquor prohibition subject should be submitted to the people at the ting.. After an hour's sharp discussion a vote was taken, and the decision of the chair reversed.

This threw out the substitute and brought the House to a direct vote on the original proposition, without any chance for any person to dodge unless he left the House. The Committee rose, on a motion to report progress, and when Raymond, as Speaker, took the Chair, the motion was made to disagree with the report of the Committee of the Whole, and that the resolution be adopted. On this the yeas and mays were called, and the resolution was rejected, the motion only receiving 38 yeas to 73 mays—a decided vote against it.

eided vote against it.
A notion was made to reconsider, and that motion was ted down, which prevents it from being brought up am this winter. It "sleeps the sleep that knows no pain this winter. It "sloops the sleep that knows no aking."

The latter portion of the session was exceedingly excitg. The leaders on both sides were fully aroused—rich ad saacy in their remarks—while the rank and file oldly stood up for the contest. The proinbition party o going about with long faces and grieving over the saut, while the other side are everywhere holding a bilee over their decided victory.

The House, coming to a vote on the Public Defence bill st night, ended a personal fight that has been in vogue ore since the bill was first brought up. The whole are side are leadership and influence in the House. It will be resembored that at an early stage of the session there was bitter contest over the financial resolutions—there sing two sets of resolutions, one known as Mr. Hulard's and the other Raymond's. The discussion took is consented that the power in the House with un, and thus be recognized as the power in the Assembly, or in other words the leader. It finally resulted in adity raying out Raymond and establishing Hulburd as a leader of the Assembly. In this fight Mr. Alvord one should carry the majority of the House with the properties of the session, combidity raying out Raymond and establishing Hulburd as a leader of the Assembly. In this fight Mr. Alvord one stage in the Assembly that was likely to give him teat influence in the legislation of the session, combiditions were made to place Mr. Hulburd in the backround.

oral efforts were made under the lead of Alvord to great influence in the legislation of the session, combibations were made to place Mr. Hubburd in the background.

Several efforts were made under the lead of Alvord to accomplish this, but no question was found upon which the members of the House could be railied until the Public befence bill came up. This bill was reported from the Militia Committee by Mr. Pierce. The committee was assisted by Mr. Hubburd in gesting it up, and that gentleman made the first speech in its defence, thus in a measure assuming its responsibility. Mr. Alvord seeing his opportunity, at once took a stand against the bill, and made a speech on its unconstitutionality; but finding that there was a strong public feeling in favor of some measure of public defence, he held a conference meeting at his rooms at the Delavan House, and prepared a substitute, accomplishing the same object that was intended by the original bill, but in a different manner and more funder the direction of the general government. This substitute was acceded to by Messrs. Hubburd and Pierce.
Havingsaccomplished this point, the friends of Mr. Alvord considered that the final action on the Defence bill would give to him the prestige of the leader of the House.
Thus maturs stood when the question was postponed for nearly a week, but Raymond had not up to this time showed his hand, he was evidently waiting his time to strike a blow that would regain him the prestige lost early in the session.

Two weeks age last Wednesday night he took the floor and made a speech, of ever two hours' duration, against all of the bills then before the Assembly. The result was that the subject was postponed for two weeks, and the general impression existed that the bills were all dead. Before the two weeks clarsed the Morrimac came out of its hiding place at Norfolk and committed its depredations upon the blockading squadron. This aroused the pesple of New York, and Eapmond found that he had got himself into hot water by his action. There was, in other words, a storm about his h

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the subject.

Mr. Coddington, from the Committee on Cities, reported this morning the New York Court House bill, also the two bills for reducing the taxation of the city of New York, by applying to the general fund the surplus in the Interest sinking fund, and converting the bonds issued to raise money for soldiers and their families into revenue binds.

Senator Connolly's bill to repeal the Bishop Hughes Ecclesiastical Tenure act, passed under the excitement of the controvery between Erastus Brooks and Bishop Hughes in the great days of Know Nothingism, passed the Senate this morning, receiving twenty affirmative votes. It has yet to be acted upon by the Assembly. Senator Bradley's Hay and Straw bill, has also passed the Senate. It prevents the use of more than fifteen pounds of wood in doing up the bales, also punishes those who place stones and other hard substances inside to increase the weight.

The Executive Committee of the State Central Republican Committee meet this morning at Congress Hall, but before concluding their labors adjourned to the Delayan House. At the latter meeting this afternoon they adopted a series of resolutions, endorsing without reservation the public policy of President Lincoln, approving of his special Message to Congress to tender and to all States that would initiate the movement of emancipation, and congratulating the public on the receased revenues. They also compliment the State on the successful management of the canais and the increased revenues. They also compliment the State on the successful management of the Assais and the increased revenues. They also specially refer to the volunteers now in the army who have heretofore acted with the democratic party, and praise them for dropping party and rallying to the protection of their country.

The House then took up the constitutional amendment for the prohibition of intoxicating drinks in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. Scholefield in the chair.

Mr. Ekonsorox speke in favor of the amendment.

The discussion prohibitory of the constitutional amendment was continued throughout the day without adjournment. Measurs, Redington, Pryne, Ackley and Cowles spoke in favor of prohibition, and Mr. Phelps argued against the resolution. He believed the theory of preventing the use of intoxicating liquors by logislative enactment a delusion. It had been tried in different countries and always failed. He was opposed as much as any man could be to the abuse of liquor, and would favor any bill to punish drunkenness, but he questioned the constitutionality of any act which would prevent a citizen of the United States, who had imported liquor and paid the duties, disposing of it where he pleased in the United States.

Mr. Tallman, of Westchester, also spoke strongly against the resolutions. He reviewed the progress of the prohibitory cracked in the several States where such legislation was attempted, in order to show that summary laws had nover been beneficial or effective. He argued against the attempts of fanatics to coerce a man into compliance with their views of propriety and morality, and made a strong argument against the adoption of the resolution.

The constitution provides that the proposed amendment shall be referred to this Legislature, and it is not in order to evade it by introducing the substitutes it was not a German subject. He denounced the substitute as stiddge to allow timid members to escape a direct vote on the resolutions.

Mr. Skraour appealed from the decision. The appeal was debated by Messrs. Pryne, Seymour, Stetson and Raymond, when the house refused to sustain the decision of the Chair, 36 to 60.

Mr. Raymond had voted some years ago for a prohibitory law. The courts had decided it to be unconstitutional. This proposition was not to insert into the constitution the clause authorizing the Legislature to pass laws subject to prohibition, but proposed engrafting the prohibition clause in the constitution itself. To this he was opposed. He was He was in favor of giving the Legislature constitutional power to pass laws do prohibition. Then the subject which is yet an experiment can be tested, and if found to work well, can be retained, or amended or repealed as appears desirable. He thought the general constitutional convention the best method of considering all these subjects; but this had been decided by the committee to be out of order at this time. It had been said by the gentleman from Wayne, (Mr. Pryne) that those who voted against these resolutions refused to submit them to a vote of the people. This was not so. The House, by the constitutional provision, is to vote on the adoption of the resolutions themselves, on their merits, and the constitution provises, if the Legislature pass resolutions, for their submission to the people. He should vote against the resolutions on these considerations.

He is about sixty years of age, and entered the Military Academy as a cadet in Soptember, 1818. He graduated in 1822, standing No. 25 in a class of forty, in which we find the names of Generals J. K. F. Mansfield, George A. McCall, T. Morris, J. J. Abercrombie and others. On the 1st of July, 1822, he was promoted to the second lieutenancy of the Fifth United States infantry, and in June tenancy of the Fifth United States minnery, and in June, 1825, was further promoted to the first lieutenancy. He became a captain of the First dragoons in March, 1833, and resigned the service on the 4th of July, 1836. On the last day of November, 1841, he was appointed a temporary paymaster of the army, and on the 14th of May, 1842, he obtained the position of full paymaster. The appointments were debited to the State of Illinois. In this latter capacity he held the same rank as a major of the active military service, and in the Army Register for 1861 his name stands second on the list of paymasters with that rank. On the 14th of May, 1861, he was appointed Colonel of the new regiment of cavalry, numerically designated as the Sixth regiment of United States cavalry, and on the 13th of the following August was made, by Congress, a major general of volunteers It will be remembered that he was ordered to report to General Frement, in Missouri, and he took charge of certain troops organizing at the depot at Rolls, and when General Fremont left St. Louis to attack Price at Lexing ton, General Hunter was to join him by a cross route General Fremont's incapacity prevented the relief of the forces at Lexington, and General Hunter was ordered to organize his division at Warsaw. This he accomplished and when Fremont had given Price time to escape from Lexington the pursuit was ordered, and General Hunter was invested with the command of the First division although by the arrangements made by the Commandia General the two divisions, commanded respectively by Generals Pope and Hunter, were the last to leave Warsaw for Springfield. The want of success in overtaking Price November General Hunter assumed command of the De-partment of the West, by orders from Washington. When General Halleck was appointed to that department a new department was created entitled the Department of Kansas, and Major General Hunter was appointed to the

As you enter you will be pleasantly but very caimly greeted, and the first leisure moment will be afforded you for your business. You will find yoursolf conversing with a man of some sixty years, above average height, hair sprinkled with grey, form slightly stooping, and whose expression of countenance denotes high intelligence, atrong resolution, and, above all, a settled, placid calanness, which convinces you that right is the basis of the conviction it shadows, and robs you of every desire to combat them. He sits there, the Major General, and twirling his golden bowed glasses, the legacy of toil and fleeting years, listens to your words and makes brief sentences his part in the conversation. Occasionally when allusion is made to a timid, halting policy, or a twaddling "message," the eyes, roofed with heavy brows, burn with light, and strong words tell his clear disguist of it all. The stars are on his shoulder, his dress is the army blue, and if you know his history you will recollect that he too is a man of West Point; but you leave his presence feeling that you have not been snubbed, and that the quiet dignity of a great man has established again in your mind the old respect for our regular army.

Such is Major General Hunter: "Black Days," as he sometimes called; a sterling soldier, and a man.

Brigadier General Henry W. Benham is a native of Connecticut, and entered the Military. Academy as a adet in the year 1833. On the 1st of July, 1837, he graduated, and was appointed to the military service as Brevet Second Lieutenant of the Corps of Engineers. He stood No. 1 in his class, and graduated at the sam time as Braxton Brugg (rebel), General Lewis G. Arnold (now commander of the department of Florida) Major Israel Vodges (of Fort Pickens fame), Genera Thomas Williams (recently commander at Hatteras) Generals French, Sodgwick and Hooker (of the Potoma, army). General Todd (of the Missouri army) and many other prominent men. He was promoted to a First Lieutenancy on the 7th of July, 1838, and served in that capacity in Mexico with Governor Seymour and other persons belonging to his native State. He was February, 1848, and was breveted Captain for his ga lant and meritorious conduct during that engagement On the 24th of May, 1848, he was promoted to a full captainty in his corps, and was considered by General Scott as one of his most reliable sistant in the expedition engaged in the United States Coast Survey, and on the 3d of March, 1855, was tendered the majority of the Ninth United States infantry, but de clined the position. In the "Army Register" his name stood second on the list of captains, thereby outranking Beauregard (rebel), whose name stood No. On the 6th of August, 1861, he was promoted to be a Major of the Corpa of Engineers, and on the 13th of the same month was further promoted to be a Brigadio General of Volunteers, at the same time retaining his position in the Engineer Corps. During General Mc Clellan's brilliant campaign in Western Virginia, and while he was the commandant of the Department of the Ohio, the then Captain Benham was the Engineer of th department, and rendered very efficient services. Gen Morris, a commander of a brigade at the glorious battles of Laurel Hill, Rich Mountain, Carricksford (where the rebel Garnett was killed), &c., thus speaks of him in his report:—"For the valuable services of Captain Be ham, of the United States Engineers, not only in the appropriate duties of his station, but in his voluntary and arduous labors in the field, the General desires. himself not only the skilful engineer, but competent t discharge any and every duty incident to military life. mand of the army of occupation in Western Virginia. dier Generalship, was assigned to the command of the Third brigade of his corped'armer, and to the Cheatriver district. He, however, demanded a court martial, but the exigencies of the service prevented its being held-He has, doubtless, convinced his superiors in rank of his innocence, for on the 17th of March he was ordered to report to the Chief of the Engineer Corps. He has since been relieved from the operations of that order, and was instructed to report without delay to Major Genera Hunter. CLARKE, 114 William street, HOW ARE YOU GENERAL ORPHEUST

Orpheus C. Kerr will meet his friends in print to-morrow, in the SUNDAT MERCURY (the circulation of which exceeds the combined issues of all the other Sanday papers), and give them such a side-shaking as they will lardly go over during the remaining days of the week. If they don't have the such as the state of the state expands to the dimensions of Manassas Gap, it will not be his fault. The Mackerel Bry gade will be on hand with their bayonets to give point to the jokes, and altogether General Orpheus will be in his glavy.
